ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates to an authentication device for authentication, and performs authentication by using both physical characteristics and behavioral

5   characteristics in a comprehensive manner. The present invention performs authentication by using time-series data including both physical characteristics such as a fingerprint and behavioral characteristics such as "movement" obtained by sliding a finger on the device (or 10   sliding the device on a finger).